DUTIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

A full-time Research Assistant position is available in the laboratory of Dr. Stéphane Richard at the Lady Davis Institute for Medical Research (LDI) /McGill University (Montreal, Canada).

Our overall mission is to perform molecular biology research in the fields of cancer and neuroscience. Our research is aimed at understanding the roles of protein arginine methylation and RNA binding proteins in diseases such as cancer. Our group is actively pursuing the molecular roles of protein methylation and RNA binding proteins in epigenetics, RNA metabolism, and DNA damage signaling.

The ideal candidate is a well organized and committed team-oriented Research Assistant with some molecular/cellular biology experience and willing to work with mouse models.

The hired RA will report directly to Dr. S. Richard and perform lab research.

JOB QUALIFICATIONS AND REQUIREMENTS:

- BSc or MSc (in Biochemistry or similar discipline) with less than 3 years research experience.
- An excellent understanding and experience of basic molecular techniques (WB, PCR) and cellular techniques (culture of adherent cancer cell lines).
- Excellent communication skills in English and/or French

ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENTS:

Candidates must be able to work legally in Canada (Canadian citizens, permanent residents, or work permit holders).

If you are interested in joining our team, please submit your C.V and a cover letter addressed to Dr. S. Richard at stephane.richard@mcgill.ca.
